Curtains

KAG manufacturer and provide curtains that are evaluated by an established set of guidelines and tested their ability to block light, regulate temperature, and hold up to use and machine washing (if applicable).

To test the curtains' light-blocking abilities, KAG turned off daytime interior lights and scored how well the curtains prevented outdoor light from leaking in. To test thermal control, KAG compared room temperature several times daily with the curtains open versus closed. KAG also scored the curtains based on fabric quality, thickness, and drape, factors that influence how well the curtains wash and wear over time.
